November Reflection

As October ended and we moved into November, time flew by whilst working on my project. I got my first little section done and was getting excited as this document was starting to form and it was looking awesome!

Looking back, I would say this work is some of the best work I have ever done. I think it says that I am here to get this project done and to improve along the way. I learned that there is going to be more revising into the work I have done, and I am ok with that. When I write more and get more done on my project, I will need to go back through my previous work to make sure it all aligns with what is currently being said.

My goals for this previous month were to create the first three sections of my business plan. I completed all of my work for the month however, it will be revisited as I learn more about the topics and what should go into them as I move along. There is a lot of parts that go into making a business plan and I am excited to get these parts put together for this one final plan. The document already looks good with my formatting. The one thing that I would change is that how I did not look at other parts of the business and used them to develop the sections I was working on.

In comparison to how others have written a business plan, I would like to say I have written mine in a different way than they have written theirs. I use a different layout or theme to display my information but, the content seems similar but also different. Yes, both have a products section and all of these other sections but that's where I feel as if the content is different. I also like to be more focused on the customer as that was explained to me on why I should be by my mentor.

One thing I would like to improve upon is meeting more with my mentor. With the holidays right around the corner and time going by faster and faster I want to make sure that my project is looking as it should throughout this process. I would also like to be able to meet my goal for the month however, I am somewhat thinking that I won't have enough time to do so. I want more help developing the numbers section of my plan to ensure I am giving accurate statements and planning properly.
